The central provinces of Albay, Sorsogon and Masbate are on alert for flash floods and landslides triggered by the rains, the Philippine Atmospheric Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration said Saturday afternoon.

Carina’s sustained winds of 55 kilometers an hour are relatively mild but the storm is expected to strengthen quickly and become a typhoon prior to reaching the far northern Philippines Saturday night.

The National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Council held a meeting on Friday and Saturday to ensure disaster prevention measures were in place, CNN Philippines reported.

Meanwhile Hong Kong and Guangdong province in mainland China are also bracing for a possible impact on Tuesday.

"Though there are still uncertainties in its track and intensity, it is expected to pose a threat to the coast of Guangdong," the Hong Kong Observatory said Saturday.
